Farm Hand Murders Two and Shoots Third

WILD AFFRAY AT MONROE; SLAYER HERE

SHERIFF SOLBRAA AND
DICK MARTY VICTIMS OF ASSASSIN.

MURDERER HELD IN LOCAL JAIL

Spirited Away From Monroe For Fear of Lynching—Soldier Near Death.

Sheriff Matt E. Solbrog and Dick Marti, prosperous farmer, both of Green county, are dead and Spencer Morton, discharged soldier, lies in the Monroe hospital in a serious condition as a result of a triple shooting affray near Monroe, Saturday afternoon.

The confessed slayer, Godfrey Vogel, 32, native of Switzerland, is today held at the Rock county jail, having been brought here late Saturday night when mob violence was feared.

Pleads Self-Defense.

He will be given his preliminary examination before Judge Grimm in either the Rock or Green county circuit court after the funeral of Sheriff Solbrog tomorrow afternoon. He admits killing the two men and wounding the third, pleading self-defense for his rash act.

Vogel shot and instantly killed his employer, Dick Marti. He barricaded himself in his room and later emptied his revolver on the sheriff who came to capture him. Two bullets struck the sheriff, one in the chest passing through his head, and one in the abdomen, which penetrated one of his kidneys. He was removed to the Monroe hospital, where he died at 3:40 o'clock Sunday morning.

Lynching Threatened

After mortally wounding Morton, the soldier, in the back, Vogel gave himself up to the posse which had been hastily organized and was taken to the Monroe jail. More than 2,000 enraged citizens and farmers incensed at the atrocity, stormed the jail for the murderer. Fearing a lynching, he was spirited away in an automobile at 1 o'clock and under an armed guard of five men was brought to Janesville and lodged in the county jail at 11:30.

Fearing a possibility of trouble at the jail last night, Sheriff Beley arranged for complete protection and had the criminal carefully guarded throughout the night. There was no trouble.

Was Willing to Quit

He said the argument began when he came to the door of the county jail. He said he was willing to leave. Vogel, who has been working on the farm for two weeks asking for some money, saying he was willing to quit.

"Just give me a couple of dollars and I'll get a new job," he said he asked Marti.

"I'll give you something else," the farmer answered, according to Vogel, making threatening motions and calling him vile names. The gunman then drew his .33 caliber revolver and fired four times, Marti dropping to the ground dead at the fourth shot. He fired the remaining bullet at Marti when he was lying on the ground to make sure he had killed him.

"I didn't want to kill him," said Vogel. "He was a good boss and I liked him. But I had to shoot him."

Tried to Shoot Self

Marti with her children then came to the door. Vogel called and a posse of farmers was formed. After mortally wounding both the sheriff and the soldier, Vogel tried to shoot himself three times while he was being besieged by the posse, but didn't succeed.

He has lived in this country six years, Vogel is not a citizen. He owns $25 worth of War Savings stamps, but no Liberty bonds. He has been working in Toledo, Ohio, where since he has been in this country and on farms and in cheese factories summers. He is single.

Bought Gun in Toledo

He bought the revolver with which he killed the two men, six months ago in Toledo. He said his employers always carried a gun and he thought he ought to. He claims he was held up in Toledo three times last winter, the last time a negro woman securing $30 from him. After that he bought the gun for $3. He also bought 50 shells. The first time he had used the gun was on summer he worked in the Schuler cheese factory in Monticello, making Limburger cheese. In 1917 he worked in the Meyer cheese factory, making Swiss cheese. The year previous he worked on the Jack Zimmerman farm near Monticello. Before going to work for Marti, two weeks ago, he worked a month on a half on the Louis Jordan farm, near Juba.

He has a mother and father, one brother and two sisters, in Switzerland, from whom he has not heard for five years.

Charm and Oratory!

Oratory is a new art for the women of America. English have preceded them in the path of eloquence turned to political account, but suffrage schools have recently become training schools for American women in the art of effective expression. Although the women scoff at the idea that their pulchritude has anything to do with it, there are many who admit that "it may help sometimes." It has been said that all of the silver-tongued male speakers have the gentler sex and that the women are not only equal in forcefulness but far better to look at. Mrs. James Laidlaw has been likened to William Pitt.

William H. Taft, Mrs. Norman deR Whitehouse has been compared favorably with William Hays and Mrs. Hale won her husband while making a woman suffrage speech. Miss McCormick, youngest of the beautiful quartet is esteemed by her fellow officials as a clever thinker, and a concise and forceful speaker.

Janesville Was Wild, Wild Town

Saturday Night, But Officials Say They Will Tame Performers

Janesville was a wild, wild town Saturday night and Sunday. The police department had one of the busiest week ends of its career. Seventeen arrests were made. "Bootlegging," burglary, street fighting and dry town violations filled out the list on the police blotter this morning. Intoxicated brawls were a common sight. Young girls "all painted and dolled up" Chief of Police William E. Gower called them, were offenders.

The police chief this morning issued warnings to frivolous girls, local and otherwise. Municipal Judge Harry L. Maxfield also had something to say in the nature of a warning but the sentences he handed out for drunkenness and fighting were a strong advertisement that conditions such as the week end saw will not be tolerated.

Liquor Easy to Get

Repetition of occurrences of six weeks ago with a large number of discharged soldiers and others still in the service featured the two days. Liquor was as easy to secure as water—only a little more costly. Any soldier with the price could get his whiskey. Open soliciting of enlisted men was common.

Street fights were not as frequent as on the previous occasion though a number took place.

Girls in knee length dresses and young women caused much trouble. They were as free with soldiers as the bootleggers were with money. No small number of couples walked the downtown streets and the residential districts until early Sunday morning. Such was the case last night.

Female females were not the only offenders. The police report the city a mecca for women from surrounding towns.

"Janesville is not going to be a carnival grounds for 'wild women,'" said Chief of Police Gower today. "These girls, all painted and dolled up will not be permitted to carry on as they did Saturday night and yesterday. We will pick them up and give them a cell if they do."

Seven Drunks in Court

Seven drunks faced the court. The judge was out last night and observed conditions in the downtown district. The results were plainly in evidence.

"I'm going to start right in this morning and tell you fellows what's what around here," he commenced before he called up a single prisoner.

"You fellows are liable to not more than three years in Waupun if you come back here again. The police department of this city has other business than to be spending all their time on you drunks from Rockford and Stoughton and other dry places."

After you fellows get out of here you can go back and advertise Janesville as the place where they hand out stiff sentences now. You won't have a chance to talk about what a great wide open and wild town it is and boast to your friends how the police picked you up and you slipped it over on the judge."

Town is No Sewer

"You fellows are making a sewer out of this town. You won't do it any more."

And then the party started.

A. Peters, Rockford, $25 and costs or 30 days in jail.

Carl Johnson, Rockford, ditto.

C. Bergstrom, Edgerton, $15 and costs or 20 days in jail.

Peter Doyle, Janesville, $25 and costs or 30 days in jail with ten days flat to think over why he didn't spend a cent for Liberty bonds.

Final Country Drive Will Put Janesville and County Over Top

PEACE —and— WAR

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

Belgium will sign the treaty of peace in spite of the feeling at Brussels that the financial, economical and territorial aspects of the pact are not satisfactory. The crown council Sunday night after the terms had been outlined by Paul Hymans, head of the Belgian delegation, so decided.

In the meantime efforts will be made to gain support in the conduct of negotiations with Holland relative to navigation on the Scheldt river and the waterways of eastern Belgium.

The printed draft of the treaty will be completed today and it is believed it will be presented Thursday. Minor details will in the meantime be cleared up and Italy will be given a chance to resume her place at the conference.

There seems to be no indication that some arrangement for Italy to participate in the ceremony at Versailles will be reached. Paris reports that a telegram has been received in Paris from Premier Orlando but its contents will not be made public until the chiefs of the allied governments have had an opportunity to discuss it.

Austria's delegation to the conference is reported to have met at Vienna and it probably will reach Paris after the Germans have received the treaty prepared for their country.

The decision to summon the Austrians is expected to influence the return of the Hungarians as well as the fact that Italy would be without a voice in the disposition of Germany's colonies should she fail to renew her connection with the conference.

So far as known Hungary has not been asked to send peace delegations to Versailles, the conference holding action in obedience pending the outcome of disorders in that country.

It develops that the Finnish troops which have occupied Petrograd are Red Guards. It is announced that they will march against the Finnish government forces of the White Guards and the seizure of the Hungarian legation at Vienna by counter-revolutionary forces, the soviet government of Hungary has demanded that German Austria take immediate action to arrest those involved in the reported seizure. Budapest meanwhile is reported to be in serious panic over the menace to the city through the seizure of the Legation of the Rumanian troops, there being no longer even a semblance of order.

TODAY'S "V" FIGURES
Janesville's Quota $825,000
Subscribed to 2:45
p. m. 709,050
To be raised.....$115,950

The $700,000 mark in Janesville's Victory loan campaign was reached at 2:45 this afternoon, factory whistles and church bells announcing the beginning of the last lap of the drive at that time.

The official figures were $709,050. The quota will be reached by tomorrow night, campaign chiefs predicted today. "In a final effort to go over the top Tuesday," the volunteers of thousands of campaigners will invade the six townships adjoining the city, starting out tomorrow morning. A general clean-up in the rural districts will be staged at Rockledge Gould.

Beloit, with the aid of the banks, went over the top Saturday. Encouraging reports have been received from other cities and villages of the county. Leading workers to believe that the entire quota will be subscribed by tomorrow night.

Workers realize that the aid of the farmers is necessary if the top mark is to be touched. With this end in view, enthusiasm and speed will mark their efforts in the rural districts tomorrow.

The total at 2:30 this morning was $452,500.

With 73 per cent of their quota subscribed up, to Saturday, Rock county stands in nineteenth place on the list of counties, having advanced from forty-second position on Thursday. Saturday's county total was $1,331,300, the quota being $2,438,700.

Five counties were over the top Saturday—Portage, Kenosha, Waushara, Kewaunee, and Marinette. Three-fourths of the state quota had been reached Saturday.

ALLIED FORCES ROUT FIRST ATTACK BY BOLSHEVIK GUNBOATS

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

Archangel, May 5.—Allied forces succeeded yesterday in repulsing the first attack by Bolshevik gunboats on the Volga.

The enemy fleet attempted to approach Archangel and although the channel is still a mass of swiftly floating ice cakes, it is only a matter of a few days until the allied gunboats can force their way upstream and get to the aid of the allied land defenses.

On the Vega sector the bolsheviks suffered heavy losses yesterday when after a long bombardment they attacked the village of Beresnik which was defended by Russian and British infantry and American engineers. Moving to the north of the village the bolsheviks attempted to penetrate the allied wire entanglements. They were completely repulsed, leaving 30 or 40 dead in front of the wire defenses and more in the forest nearby.

Another enemy force which attempted to cut the allied line of communication east of the Vega also was repulsed. Several of this party surrendered when surrounded.

Artillery fire continues in this sector. The allied casualties there yesterday were four wounded.

The council met at the palace at 8 o'clock and continued in session until midnight.

Paul Hymans, minister of foreign affairs, and head of the Belgian delegation at the peace conference, speaking for himself and for his colleagues, Emile Vandervelde and M. Vanderveken who remained in Paris, completely outlined the situation and gave a review of the peace terms. He expressed the opinion that the treaty as it now stands gave honorable and satisfactory terms to Belgium and recommended that it should be signed.

The council unanimously endorsed M. Hymans' view, but was equally unanimous in expressing the opinion that the attention of the powers should be drawn to the financial and economic situation in Belgium and to the necessity that the allies assure Belgium to the complete restoration to her economic restoration. FIRE DAMAGES PLANES; MAY HALT SEA DASH

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

New York, May 5.—Fire at the naval air station at Rockaway beach today damaged the naval seaplanes N. C. 1 and N. C. 4 which were to start tomorrow morning on the first leg of the trans-Atlantic flight.

The wings of the N. C. 1 were completely destroyed and this plane may be unable to attempt the ocean cruise. It was believed that the N. C. 4 could be repaired in time for the "jump off."

The blaze, which Commander John H. Towers, declared was accidental, started from an electric spark which ignited gasoline on the N. C. 1. The flames enveloped the wings and spread to those of the N. C. 4 which occupied the same hangar. Air station employees extinguished the fire after slight damage had been done to the N. C. 4.

EDDIE GRIFFIN IN AGAIN; BOOTLEGGING CHARGE THIS TIME

Eddie Griffin has a hard time keeping out of the hands of the police. Now they have him for bootlegging, purchasing liquor for soldiers and the prisoner, and present out on $300 bail on second offense drunkenness charges, faces possibility of being a target for federal authorities.

Griffin demanded a preliminary examination when arraigned this morning and when it was closed Judge L. L. Maxfield bound him over for trial on May 14 and held him under $1,500 bail.

Joe Dolle, La Crosse, a Motor Transport Corps corporal, just discharged, was the star witness for the state in the examination. Dolle testified to seeing Griffin on Academy street and asked if he wanted liquor. Dolle said he told Griffin he did not but pointed out a 14th Inf. soldier and two Camp Grant Motor Transport Corps men, still in the service, who did. He said he accompanied Griffin across the street, was with him when he approached them, heard Griffin ask for $5.50 from the soldiers and accompanied Griffin into the Commercial hotel bar where the latter purchased three pints of whiskey.

Coming out the bar was arrested by Officers Milton Rogers and Alonzo Cain who, Chief of Police William E. Gover testified later, had seen Griffin with Dolle and suspected he was completing a deal to provide Dolle with liquor.

The three Camp Grant men disappeared when the arrest was made but District Attorney Stanley G. Dunwiddie, who with Chief Gover started the case, said Griffin has already been in communication with Camp Grant authorities with the idea of calling in the soldiers as witnesses.

Miss L. M. Stoddard, clerk of the uniting, was put on the stand by the district attorney to get into the records the information contained in the court criminal docket that Griffin in 1917 had been sentenced to a term of ninety days in the county jail on drunkenness charges.

Voice of the People

To the Editor: I agree with "Soldier's Friend" in Saturday's paper. Why should men who have not been out of the States be chosen as delegates to the State convention, when we have plenty of boys who have come back from No Man's Land, all honorably discharged and some decorated.

Those who "volunteered" not had to be "drafted" are the ones to go. There are lots who will give their $1.00 for the dance and not attend, so it will be a success to the "boys," but let's have "fair play" to the "real war veterans" who not the would be ones.

Let us hear from more "friends of our boys."

COUNTY TEACHERS RECEIVE $60 TO $85 FOR MONTH'S WORK

Teachers' salaries in Rock county have been tabulated in the Rock county Educational Bulletin, showing the lowest, $60, being received by 45 teachers, the highest $85, received by one teacher.

The further distribution of salaries in the county schools is as follows: 3 teachers receive $82.50, 2 teachers receive $83, 27 teachers receive $85, 14 teachers receive $70, 2 teachers receive $73, 2 teachers receive $75, 2 teachers receive $80.

To these amounts should be added, in many cases, two, four, or eight dollars, bonus from the state, which is more than likely that this schedule will be raised several notches during the next year.

Nearly one half of the teachers in Rock county now are graduates of the county training school. Including the class of 1919, this school will have graduated 160 teachers in the past 8 years. About 350 country teachers have secured certificates at the summer sessions, and some 300 young women have secured or are securing training at the regular sessions. Graduates will meet for the annual alumni dinner Saturday, June 14.

This school was established in the spring of 1911. It holds sessions in the Jefferson school. The model school which was started three years ago, offers practical experience to the teachers.

Wisconsin is the only state in the union to have county training schools. The first one was established 20 years ago. There are now 30 training schools in the state. All teachers are required to take at least one year of professional training. The graduates of the county training schools make good in their work.

104 BONUS CHECKS ARE RECEIVED HERE

The $60 annuity was seen on the faces of 104 Janesville soldiers the last of last week upon receipt of their army bonuses, received through the aid of Miss Mabel Shumway, of the Red Cross home service department. Miss Shumway received word from Washington that 104 checks had been mailed to Janesville. She sent another packet of 70 discharge papers to Washington today.

Keep up your hope, the money is coming, is the gist of an order received by Postmaster this morning in explanation of the delay in sending bonuses.

"Since March an unprecedented volume of registered mail has been received for delivery in connection with claims for soldiers' and sailors' bonuses," says the Washington message. "The mail in three weeks has equalled the normal amount received in six months. The increase is unexpected and unprepared for. Considerable congestion resulted. The records are voluminous and for that reason it has been found impossible to expedite the vast number of inquiries received."

Bonus checks are being mailed out at the rate of 25,000 a day. The applications are being received at the rate of 80,000 to 80,000 a day.

HOW SOME OCEAN FLIERS MAY END TRIPS

British aviator climbing from wrecked plane to H. M. destroyer Umpire.

The danger accompanying a trans-Atlantic flight will be reduced to a minimum by all governments by means of a string of naval vessels at intervals of 100 or 200 miles along the route chosen. As the airplanes used will be equipped with wireless apparatus the pilots can summon aid should need arise. The photo shows a British aviator came to grief while flying along the coast, his plane dropped in the water but the H. M. destroyer Umpire, nearby, came to his rescue.

HEAVY COUNCIL PROGRAM PROMISED

The sixth meeting of the common council in five weeks is scheduled for this evening and indications at the city hall today that city officials to predict an unusually heavy program of business.

More important of the many matters at hand today and listed for consideration was the report of Alderman Lawrence Cronin and Ensign H. Ransom of the Third Ward on their investigation of the Oakland Ave. pavement, charged by David Holmes as in poor condition, breaking in places and need of immediate attention for preservation, the report of City Engineer C. V. Kerch on progress made on the street improvement program to look-up the plans for the laying of ten miles of sanitary sewers and water mains, the report of the committee on Public Buildings as regards the remodeling of the city hall basement and the report of the committee on the report from Superintendent of Streets Thomas McKewon containing a list of forty-two property owners who refuse to pay board sidewalks and, but not least, the report of the high school site purchasing committee and the result of their dicker with John Soullman for the sale of his South Main street property.

It was reported that the city hall today that the school site committee had reached an agreement with Mr. Soullman and had offered and secured the property for $12,000, a difference of $500 either way from the first figures offered and the first price demanded.

Should such be the case and the committee reports favorably for the purchase of Mr. Soullman's property then the condemnation proceeding papers City Attorney Roger Cunningham was ordered to prepare by the council two weeks ago will go into the waste basket. Every indication points to the council's approval of the site committee's recommendation should they report a $12,000 deal with Mr. Soullman.

Among the routine matter to come before the council will be the allowing of bills for labor and material for the past month and the April reports of the health officer, Dr. Fred B. Welsh, the city nurse, Mrs. E. M. Harvey, the police department, Chief of Police William E. Gover, the plumbing inspector, George W. Slightam, the municipal court, Judge L. L. Maxfield and of the Board of Education by S. C. Burnham, its clerk.

SKAVLEM FAMILY HONORS SOLDIER SONS

An impromptu gathering of one of the oldest pioneer families of Rock county was held in Beloit, Friday evening at the home of Mrs. Caroline Thompson, sister of H. L. Skavlem of this city. The Skavlem family gathered from Stoughton, Orfordville, Beloit and Janesville, 4 members being present to greet the young soldiers of the family returned from overseas.

Five generations were represented at the gathering. Talks were given by the soldiers, Owen Skavlem of this city telling of first line work. Ernest Wegley, Orfordville, told of the work of the battery, and Orson Neilson, Beloit, told of his service in the Russian front, of which he was an eye-witness, during the two revolutions.

Sixteen Skavlem boys served their country during the great war. One made the supreme sacrifice. H. L. Skavlem of this city expressed the gratitude of the family for the credit brought upon the Skavlem name by the valor of its young men, telling them that their greatest reward lies in the knowledge that they were loyal Americans, "for," he said, "quoting from the Bible (Rienzi) to be an American is greater than a king."

WOMEN IN WAR WORK
PRAISED BY MRS. KERCH

A comprehensive paper on "Women's Part in Winning the War," was a feature of the program of the Philomathian club held at the home of Mrs. C. V. Kerch, Saturday afternoon. Mrs. C. V. Kerch, Saturday afternoon, said women it was said there were fully a million tilling the soil and raising crops, and another million engaged in making munitions and other war supplies. Besides these tasks they drove cars in the war zone, and did other necessary tasks behind the lines.

It did not take the women of the United States long to get into the work as they were well organized, and their help was tendered immediately to the government.

About a million women, it was computed, worked in factories manufacturing cotton cloth, woollens, shoes, gas masks, rivets for ships, air planes, manufacturing shells, and working in the canneries to supply the army with food.

Besides this they raised enormous quantities of food in crops in back yards and in garden spots. The head of the Red Cross, Mrs. Kerch said, announced that the women of this nation had manufactured garments for the Red Cross to the value of $36,000,000. They worked in motor corps, in canteen service, in nursing groups, and in library service. When Hoover called on the women, to conserve food, each house mother became a volunteer conservation expert.

A unique stunt was put over by Mrs. H. D. Mordock as a surprise to the club. It was supposed to be a narrative of events 20 years hence and included several musical numbers.

Mrs. Andrew Gibson gave a humorous reading and Mrs. Koebelin and Mrs. Claire Capelle gave reports from the district convention. Refreshments were served.

'WORKING PEOPLE' IS SUBJECT OF SERMON
BY REV. MELROSE

In deference to the wish of the government to observe Employment Sunday a sermon was preached yesterday morning by Rev. J. A. Melrose at the Federated church along the line of ideas presented by that topic.

As a preliminary thought connected with the subject, the speaker outlined the fact that the most important thing about man was his view of the universe.

The simple but far reaching inference in the text was of a God who works and the sequence which follows, of a working people. The old idea of the church, it was shown, was of a God who dwelt unapproachably in absolute bliss, sitting on a throne of ivory, holding dominion over men. "This was the kind of God," he said, "which was worshipped in great cathedrals, while impressive sermons were preached in this honor, and He was worshipped with reverence and awe."

"The words of Jesus when he says, 'My father worketh and I work,' changes the tasks from drudgery to achievement. There ought to be the outlook of vision and the joy in the task, which should awaken interest, and change it from routine, to delight," he said.

He emphasized the thought that religion should be practical, and have its center of gravity in the earth, while it reached up to the gates of heaven. It should be sweet and beautiful, yet there should be no mirage between it and the practical problems, underneath.

"Man," Rev. Melrose said, "has no vision and when he stands up and speaks for the rights of capital or labor, he speaks wrong, because the problem cannot be solved that way. It must be solved in light of human relationship. People must think of the responsibilities and common fellowship and not of their rights, and they must learn that cooperation is best for all."

Rev. Melrose felt that the church at this time had great responsibilities, that it must show the man of the privileged class how he might gain insight and have new hope and courage, and he of the laboring class how to lay hold of himself and realize that it was safer to be patient and not give way to those methods which lead men to ruin."

"America is a democracy but, not yet one industrially," he stated, "and we can help to save the world by making real this conception of his. God wants what is best for us, and what he does not want brings trouble. One thing which is distressingly needed, he said, "is this idea, that God is bringing in the new way and despite differences separating the people, is uniting all in one fellowship of justice and truth."

The choir, directed by Prof. Taylor, sang "Like as a Hart," by West in which A. Schoof gave the solo. George Waldman also sang a solo.

Rev. Willmann Thanks Friends for Kindness

Rev. Henry Willmann, of Trinity church, who is convalescing from a severe illness with pneumonia at the Mercy hospital sends the following letter of thanks to members of his congregation and his friends:

"I am still in the confines of the sick room, but happily the prospects of soon leaving it are in sight. The continual kindness of so many of you has helped shorten the time of my stay. I am appreciative of all that has been done."

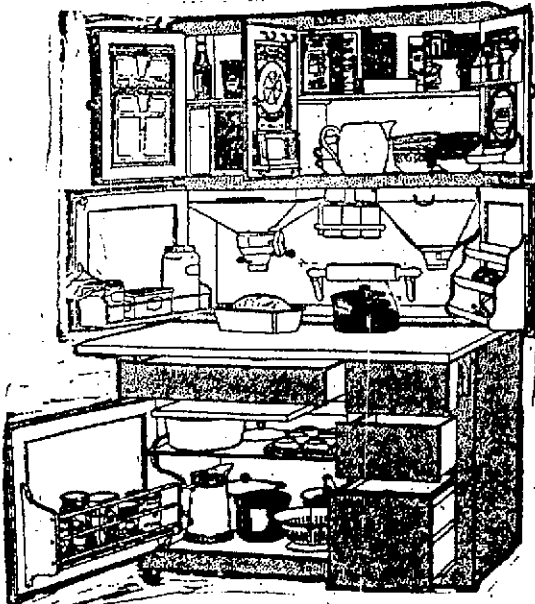

"Last Sunday, the occasion of my birthday, I was overwhelmed with remembrances and kindness, words fail me to express my appreciation of the greatest gift of all. The purse of gold from friends in and out of the church, I really do not know what to say or to promise, a mere thank you seems so inadequate I feel as though you had bound me with a chain of golden love."

"Assuring you of my appreciation of all that you have done and with prayers for God's blessing on you all. Faithfully your friend and pastor, Henry Willmann"

WOOD BOOM GROWS.

Within the last few days the candidacy of Gen. Leonard Wood for presidency has become stronger. The growth in sentiment is said to have been natural and not inflated. Republican leaders, in fact, declare that the popularity of the general's candidacy is not caused by a boom. It is said that many states from coast to coast have signified their liking for the military man as a harmony candidate. This expression does not come from just one faction of the party, according to those who are in close touch with the situation. It is said the conservative element of the G. O. P. can see Wood in a favorable light. Members of the progressive wing are in most part well pleased with the possibilities of Wood for president.

This is rumor that sifts in from many points and what may happen before a campaign gets into full swing is, of course, problematical.

Senator Moses of New Hampshire explains the drift of sentiment toward Wood as follows: "The people are running away from Wilson, who will return home sadly diminished in prestige. In turning away from such a figure the inevitable tendency of the public mind is to seek its antithesis. Col. Roosevelt embodied this ideal to the last degree and, had he lived, I think he would have been our candidate, named perhaps by acclamation. With him gone there is a demand for an inheritor of the Roosevelt legend."

"To many minds Leonard Wood seems the rightful heir. With Roosevelt, he sought to serve overseas and was refused that privilege; with Roosevelt, he accepted uncomplainingly the fate which jealous politicians meted out to him, and he did his full duty at home, like the good soldier he is."

"Like Roosevelt, he has an infectious personality which has baffled all the plans of the administration to pocket him. Exiled to Charleston, he infected the south, and nowhere has he more ardent admirers than in that solidly democratic section. Sent to the pacific plains of Kansas, he inoculated that whole region with his genius, and now the prairies of Kansas are ablaze with enthusiasm for him. Transferred now to the cosmopolitan Chicago, he seems to be repeating there his experiences in the democratic south, and the pacific west."

U. S. AND BRITAIN.

Recent developments growing out of the peace conference impress upon America the wisdom of maintaining indulently the close relation which now exists between this country and Great Britain. The man who can still feel resentment over the experiences of over a century and a half ago is in the same class as he who would keep alive any hatred growing out of the clash between the north and the south. It is for us to look to the future rather than the past. In fact, we have a great deal to do in the future and judging from the turn things have taken in the last few weeks, it behoves us to determine in no uncertain manner, just who our friends are.

We have ideals and institutions that we wish to preserve. Great Britain has the same ideals and institutions.
Other peoples, perhaps as numerous and potentially as powerful as the English speaking peoples, are struggling for entirely different and quite antagonistic ends. How unwise, then, would it be for us, who have the same great ends in view, to refuse to work in harmony?

The unity of purpose of the English-speaking peoples and the importance of unity of action have been strikingly demonstrated at the peace conference. By working steadfastly together the British and American delegates are making possible a peace of justice, which is the only kind of peace that will satisfy the American people. But they have been hampered at every turn by delegates from Italy and Japan.

The future, of course, must remain very much of a sealed book, yet we owe it to ourselves and to those who come after us to consider what dangers it may have in store for Anglo-Saxon civilization, and to guard in ex-cessible way against those dangers. Consider the present world situation. Italy and Japan, countries which at one time some of us, innocently believed entered the war to make the world unsafe for the Pru-sian brand of militarism, are angry and sullen because we stand in the way of their imperialistic ambitions.
Bolshevists, the world over, depose English-speaking countries because they recognize them as the worst foes of anarchy; the militarists of Germany hate us, because we brought about their downfall. Suppose all these forces should some day unite to curb or destroy Anglo-Saxon civilization? Would they not be likely to consider their chances of success better if America and Great Britain were at odds? And is it not likely that they would be discouraged from making such an attack if they knew in advance that these two great peoples would stand steadfastly together through every crisis?

A league of nations is to be established and some of us expect much from it. But Americans should keep this in mind: That no league will be a success and save us from war and imperialistic ambitions of other nations if there does not at all times exist a close understanding and unity of action between the governments of Great Britain and the United States.

CLEARING NORTH LAND.

Much interest is being shown in the land clearing special train which is to tour 20 of the northern counties of Wisconsin to give a demonstration of the ease with which land can be cleared if the proper methods are used. The great wealth which lies in the soil under the cut-over timber lands is almost inestimable. Some of the most fertile land in the state is to be found in the north. Farmers who have cleared the land in this section have reaped great crops.

With this portion of the state put in preparation for agriculture a long step will have been taken by the agricultural college of the university for a "Better Wisconsin." It will mean that more first-class soil will be available for tilling by the hundreds of families who will move northward in the next few years.

Janesville and Rock county will go over the top in the Victory Liberty loan drive before tomorrow night, according to present indications. Although the response has been slow in some quarters, the patriotic people of this community are lending their dollars to Uncle Sam with the same generosity they showed in other loan campaigns.

A Wisconsin farmer has two sons who are to take over his farm. His present methods will be reflected in the income of the farm for his boys in later years, and the fact that he is now using a scrub bull will cost his sons hundreds of dollars when they are ready to take the farm.

No matter if you have only a few cows you can afford to use a high-class pure bred bull. Four or five neighbors can "chip in" and buy a good sire. Use this bull for two years, then trade him for another of the same breed.

Judging from the present actions of the weatherman, he is conserving a mighty big lot of hot weather for us to be used during the summer. Heavy overcoats worn on May 5th, make spring seem remote.

OUR DREAMS.

The present is our dream.
Wherein we live real parts;
The past is but a memory
Of glad and achine hearts.

The future, though, holds out to us
In mystic, clouded haze.
Life's multiform uncertainties
Set forth in varied ways.

Ofttimes our Gay Deceiver
Would make things to us seem
As though we simply had to wish—
But lo! An idle dream.

No sooner with hands outstretched
To greet the magic light.
We find with rather keen dismay
It's faded from our sight.

What is that same illusion
That will not be gained—
Evasive, ever-promising—
That question never ahead?

Frank Ward of Richmond is a genius. Recently a sewer pipe became stopped and the task of finding the stoppage involved tearing up the line from one end to the other. Mr. Ward found a good-sized turtle near the Crispin mine. He cut a hole in its shell, put a string through it, dug a hole to the pipe line at a joint, put the turtle in the pipe and told it to "giddap." It promptly began clawing its way through and when it stopped to rest a tug at the string was enough to start it again. It cleaned 2 1/2 feet of pipe nicely, and the tide rolls on.

DRESSED FOR TRANS-ATLANTIC FLIGHT

Major J. C. P. Wood, left, and Capt. C. C. Wylie in electrically heated garb they will wear in ocean flight.

One of the most important details attending the attempts to fly across the ocean is the clothing of the men handling the planes. The air in the high altitude at which they will fly is far below freezing. To keep them warm the men will wear heavy fur-lined clothing and boots fitted throughout with pads heated by electricity. Major Wood and Captain Wylie, shown above in their flying outfits, will pilot the Shortt brothers' airplane across the Atlantic from England. They fell into the Irish sea on their first attempt. Major Wood is the pilot and Captain Wylie is his assistant.

The Rivals

By ALVAH JORDAN GARTH

(Copyright, 1919, by Western Newspaper Union.)

Two young men met on the crowded city street and shook hands, gingerly rather than suspiciously. Each scanned the other in a fathoming sort of way, as though seeking to read his thoughts or to determine from general appearance or facial expression how the world had fared with him, for they had not met to speak for two years.

There was a sharp contrast between the two. Alden Dale, plainly but neatly dressed, suggested the student and thinker.

Garland Eyre, flashing eyed, mobile of lips, restless and erratic in his movements, suggested the typical broker, even on the alert and under a strain. He covertly observed the suitcase, momentarily constructing a theory as to its presence. "OK on a train, I see!" he remarked.

"Why, yes," replied Alden in his straightforward way. "I'm going home for a week or two."

"Wish I could arrange to do that. Believe I'll try," said Eyre, his underlying purpose camouflaged, for Alden detected the thin disguise of general. "I'd like to loaf around the old burg for a spell. How have the fates dealt with you, Dale?"

"Plentifully," answered Alden. "I was admitted to the bar in August and they honored me with an appointment with the Law Protective league. The compensation is only a livelihood, but it is useful work and fine legal training, and I have written a book or two, and that has helped out."

"Show us something!" boomed out Eyre, and he took a bankbook from his pocket. "That's me!"

"Jills were all money values, as he showed the chronicle of bank balances approximating thirty thousand dollars. "Promoted the Casa Grande Realty company, you know," he said. "Why, I read something lately in the newspaper that the company had failed," observed Alden.

"Yes, we hit a snag and they landed a receiver down on us," admitted Eyre lightly, "but we've reorganized. Money coming both ways, see? The investors have come on with a pro rata assessment, so we are still gathering in the shekels. Got to attend a meeting of the directors," he added, glancing at his watch and flashing his bediamonded hand effectively, "so good-by. I say, though, a pretty neat surplus for two years, eh?"

Alden went on his way immersed in thought. There was a strong distaste in his mind as he reflected over what Eyre had just told him. The Casa Grande had been denominated a swindle in the public prints. "Milked dry by its exploiters," it was declared. "Two years?" The words comprised a text for some meditation. When the two young men had left their native village both were in love with Myrtle Robbins. By a queer coincidence both had decided to try their fortunes in the city, and in turn they had visited bluff, straightforward Peter Robbins and had intimated their feelings toward Myrtle.

"Well," said Mr. Robbins, "what you are after is to get me to allow Myrtle to keep up a correspondence with you? Plainly—no. You are promising young fellows, and I wish you all kinds of luck, and Myrtle likes you both, but she is too young to think of a beau. In two years, when you have shown your business mettle, come back here. So Alden and Eyre had to be content with that, and now the two-year period was up and the one thought in the mind of Alden was Myrtle. And Garland Eyre attended no directors' meeting, but, hurrying to his hotel, packed his grip forthwith and reached Virden one train later than Alden.

"In a showdown I feel pretty sure that old Robbins will favor me, fat bank roll," he chirped complacently, and, being of the brassy, push-ahead kind, by nightfall of the next day all Virden knew of his diamonds and gaudy attire and bank roll. When that evening he called at the Robbins home it was in a big hired motorcar, and he spent two hours talking mainly of himself and his glittering prospects for wealth. He fancied he had impressed Myrtle greatly, attributing her subdued manner to awe and admiration.

If he had been present during the visit of Alden the following evening, however, Eyre would not have felt so sure of himself. Father and daughter had heard of his work in the city, particularly of his writings. The modest young author was duly delighted when he found both Myrtle and her father familiar with the same. Before the week was out, in turn the young men called upon Mr. Robbins requesting permission to pay their addresses to Myrtle.

Alas! for the lofty aspiration of the reorganizer of Casa Grande. The morning paper announced the issuance of a fraud order against its promoters and a levy on the stockholders against all their bank funds, including Eyre's thirty thousand dollars. The latter found it judicious to return at once to the city to untangle his involved business affairs.

When Alden Dale called upon Mr. Robbins next day the latter viewed him with an approving eye. "To help you on your way, Dale," said the old man, paternally. "I'll say that Myrtle has kept your photograph on the wall of her room ever since you went away. If she likes you as well as she did your books your case is won and—I'm agreeable!"

Not Alarmed. "The crows don't seem to pay any attention to that scarecrow." "No. The pesky critters think it's one of them artists from the city drawin' pictures!"—American Boy.

Edgerton, May 5.—Ernest Menhall, 10 year old youth of Beloit, gave a four minute talk on the fifth Liberty loan Saturday evening at the Lyric theater. Young Menhall is a clever little speaker and he put forth facts that were most convincing. He delivered his talk right to the point and was not in the least embarrassed. Without a doubt he outclassed any thing Edgerton has ever heard in the line of a four minute talk. As a speaker he has carried all the honors at Beloit, where he attends school and apparently the large audience the more he seems at ease.

Rev. E. S. Worcester, Madison, spoke at the community service at the Congregational church Sunday evening. He talked on the "Duty of the Church to the Community and the Duty of the Community to the Church."

Mr. and Mrs. Henry Morrissey, Milwaukee, who have been spending a few days at the home of Edgerton relatives returned to their home last evening.

Miss Hattie Short and Miss Esther Bardeen, Madison, were Sunday visitors in the city.

A CHANCE TO LIVE

By ZOE BECKLEY

THE NEW MEMBER.
By and by Jim Hargan was better and got a place again. It was not as good a place as the other, but it was a place.

"One day Annie found her mother crying. She was sewing on something made of calico—a blackground with tiny bunches of pink, red and yellow flowers on it."

"What's the matter, mother?" Annie was stabbed with concern.

"Nothing," said Mrs. Hargan, wiping her eyes on the calico garment.

"But there must be! Did—did you find it out?" Once Annie's mother had cried over some sick child brought from the noddle factory to work on at home. It seemed something had been out wrong and had to be "paid for."

"No, it's all right. Run along, Annie, and take the baby out."

"Is it a dress for the baby?" Annie fingered the black stuff. The baby naps get the best of things. Annie's clothes were hodgepodge out of odds and ends—except those Aunt Maggie bought her.

"Perhaps," said Annie's mother, and went with her. Annie immediately, however, she was thinking.

"Mother!"

"Yes?"

"Mother, I'm nine. When I'm ten I can get a place at Kately's store, on Third avenue. Edith Romer's store. She told the man she was 12, going on 13. She gets two dollars a week and a great deal, isn't it? I'm going to do it, too, so's you and father won't have to work so hard. And when I'm bigger I'm going to be a typewriter writer like Aunt Maggie. I'd rather be that than—"

"Annie stopped here. She was on the verge of saying that she'd rather live alone like Aunt Maggie and have a nice room all to herself and neat clothes, and a watch and chain, than to be like mother always working and cooking and having trouble about money. But that would surely be wrong to say. She caught herself in time and finished lazily, "than anything."

"You must keep right on going to school," answered her mother. "You will never be like your Aunt Maggie unless you do. Your mother's got work straight on with your school and stop thinking about Kately's store."

A short time after that there was a great stir about the place. Annie was taken over to her Aunt Maggie's boarding house, and when she was brought home again there was a new baby.

Annie was frantic to take it in her arms. The woman from across the hall snatched her away and busied herself over Mrs. Hargan.

"You look after your little sister," the neighbor said, and if you're a good girl you can come back in a couple of hours and I'll let you hold him a minute."

The couple of hours seemed an eternity of time. A baby brother! It seemed too wonderful to be true. The neighborhood boys could no longer taunt her with "Coochie—its mother's got a baby and nothin'!" She could be as proud as any of them now! Annie felt her whole social status elevated.

HEALTH TALKS

By WILLIAM BRADY, M. D.

LETTERS MAY BE ADDRESSED TO DR. BRADY, IN CARE OF THE GAZETTE

PREVENTING GOITRE

Physicians who investigated the condition of the thyroid gland in school-children from the fifth to the twelfth grades in a city of the Great Lakes goitre district found less than half of the girls had normal thyroid glands, and 2.14 of the girls (68 percent of those examined) had enlarged thyroids—goitres.

Recent studies made in this district warrant the assertion that "simple goitre is the most common of all known diseases to prevent."

In Akron, Ohio, prevention of simple goitre has been accomplished in the school-children on a large scale by the administration of the minute of sodium iodide in the drinking water of school-children ten to seventeen years of age over a period of a few weeks. Examinations made six months later showed that not a single pupil who had received the treatment had developed goitre, whereas among those who had not received the prophylactic treatment, goitres were found in 16 percent of the children within that six months period.

Girls were selected for the demonstration of the value of the preventive measure because simple goitre occurs six times as frequently among girls as among boys.

The investigators who have conducted these valuable studies of goitre prevention give assurance that treatment never produces a toxic condition like exophthalmic goitre, whereas many remedies popularly employed for the treatment of simple goitre. This freedom from danger of lighting up a simple goitre into a toxic or exophthalmic goitre prompts me to describe the treatment of goitre here.

Although it is intended to prevent simple goitre, there is no doubt that it will bring about most improvement and often complete cure of a simple goitre, already established.

The dose of sodium iodide given daily amounts to approximately three grains for each school day for a child in the fifth, sixth, seventh or eighth grade. For older girls six grains may be given daily. The medication is given for four to six weeks, then discontinued. These doses of sodium iodide dissolved in a glassful or more of water have little taste.

Simple goitre seems to depend on an inadequate supply of iodine in food. Persons with a tendency to goitre should therefore cultivate iodine-containing foods, such as fresh or salt sea fish, clams, oysters, lobsters, shrimp, sea weed, such as carrageen (Irish moss), which may be chewed or (Irish moss), which may be chewed or eat, obtained from places near the sea, where the salt naturally contains traces of iodine. Iodine is naturally present in sea water. Land regions in America, England, Switzerland and other parts of the world show an undue prevalence of simple goitre because distance from the sea makes sea foods unpopular.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS
Mr. T. B. C. Viseheimer

"When one with TBC exercises what the danger signals? I mean how many and how often the exercise is doing him harm or not? How does exercise affect the formation of scar tissue, and how can it be combined with other hygienic measures help to dry up the lungs? I had one lung collapsed by a severe cold and have heard it said that you are a cured case of TBC. Is that so? I will be everlastingly indebted to you for some good advice."

(W. S. A.)

ANSWER.—Very well, then if I had TBC I should place myself under the direction of a physician and not enter upon any fool experiments. I should leave it entirely to my physician to decide whether I needed any exercise and if so, how much. Even when a tuberculosis individual has had the surgical treatment, however, he still knows his doctor better than a doctor, and he can realize that in time there is still a chance for cure.

Tuberculosis at Home
Please inform me whether a case of incipient tuberculosis can be treated at home successfully. (Mrs. F. J. M.)

ANSWER.—Yes, provided the patient constantly under the supervision of a doctor, has suitable facilities for the open air rest in bed or chair, wholesome food well served, and freedom from annoyance of any kind. If these things are not available, it is far better for the patient to enter a well conducted sanatorium. Sanatorium care is a more certain and in any case is beneficial, because in a tuberculosis sanatorium the patient learns how to obey his doctor in all things. That, of course is the only safe course for one with tuberculosis.

Heart and Home Problems
LETTERS MAY BE ADDRESSED TO MRS. THOMPSON, IN CARE OF THE GAZETTE

Dear Mrs. Thompson: You expressed a desire for readers to give their opinions in regard to soldier husbands and war brides.

I am a married woman but still very young. My husband has been only to find out soon after that it is a love marriage on my part, but the other hand I have a model husband, one of whom any woman might be proud.

I am most unhappy. I am married and I must abide by the laws of God. So it is with soldier husbands. The fact that they are soldiers does not give them the privilege to marry whom they please and later discard her for another. They should be soldiers more than one way and live up to their agreement. Marriage is a sacrament and should be treated as such. Of course this applies to girls also.

Young people would only take advice and learn the difference between true love and merely infatuation, how many heartaches would be saved.

Thank you for your interesting letter. There are many who agree with you that although a mistake has been made, the couple should rise above it and make the best out of their lives together rather than break their vows.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: I have a boy and a girl who I like very much, but my mother does not like to have me go with him. I told this boy my mother did not like him and has never liked him and asked me for a date since. When we meet on the street we always speak to each other.

Do you think if I were to send him a birthday card he would think I just sent it because I wanted him to start going with me again? Or would he realize that I just sent it to let him know I thought of him?

PUZZLED BROWN EYSS.
Send the card if you want to. I do not believe he will think you are running after him.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: I am a high school girl and do housework in order to buy my books and the clothes I have. My father had his leg cut off five years ago and has had to work as an elevator man ever since. Mother works, but father urges me to finish high school and he is hard to scrape up enough money for all of us.

At school I get discouraged because my classmates look down on me. Sometimes I wonder if it is worth while to go on and get an education, while they would like to have me go to work, but father urges me to finish school at all cost. He is not educated and says that is the reason he has to be an elevator man now.

At the end of my sophomore year. Do you think it will be worth while to go on and finish when my family needs the money I might be earning?

I am at the end of my sophomore year. Do you think it will be worth while to go on and finish when my family needs the money I might be earning?

Keep up your studies, but you should not get discouraged. If you were to leave school now you would probably never earn enough money to be of much help to your parents. But if you complete your course you can work in a higher class position, and because of your trained mind, advance faster than a girl without education. It is ridiculous to care because your classmates look down upon you. If they were old enough to appreciate the value of education, they would have a different view of you. Keep your mind set firmly on a bright future and you will be able to bear the discouragements of the present. I am sure you will have your father's encouragement to back you. He knows from experience and suffering how valuable an education is.

SMART BEACH CAPE HAS HAT TO MATCH

BY ELOISE

The cape while very dashing and smart and convenient to slip over frocks is really not very practical if one needs to wrap for warmth. Its airy folds are quite too chilly for some of the raw spring days. For summer wear, however, it will be more popular. It will take the place of many a sport coat and sweater. It seems that the cape is just the wrap one needs to wear over the frilly ruffled frocks of the coming season with their full sleeves which would crush so easily in a snug-fitting coat. There are many styles of capes, beach capes and even rain capes.

This costume will create quite a sensation when it is worn on the summation which is quite French. Amber, yellow and white checked velvet is out in voluminous folds and make the cape and a huge tassel is the only trimming. A chic little hat to match completes the idea.

and return to oven and brown. Serve while hot.

POACHED EGGS.—Have a shallow pan two-thirds full of boiling salted water, allowing half a teaspoon of salt to each cup of water. Break eggs into a shallow dish and slip carefully into the water which should not be allowed to boil while the eggs are cooking. The eggs should be covered with white. Cook until white is firm and there is a film over the top. Remove with skimmer to pieces of buttered toast. A few drops of vinegar in water prevents the spreading of the whites. Oiled muffin rings may be placed in the pan to help retain the shape or egg poachers may be used.

Omelet.—Four eggs, one-half teaspoon salt, few grains pepper, four tablespoons hot water, one tablespoon butter. Separate the yolks from the whites. To the yolks add salt, pepper and hot water and beat until thick and fold into first mixture. Heat omelet pan and butter sides and bottom. Turn in mixture, spread evenly, place on range where it will cook slowly, occasionally turning the pan (that the omelet may brown evenly).

When well puffed and delicately browned underneath, place pan over to finish cooking the top. If none of the mixture sticks to the finger when "tried" the omelet has cooked long enough. Fold and turn onto a hot platter. Garnish with parsley or cream.

RUTH CAMERON

A Woman's Mistake.
How the average woman does crave reassurance as to her husband's love. How could it have been a man who loved died in its last expression?

There is among my intimate friends a woman whose husband is unusually devoted. She knows this and yet she is perennially asking him to testify anew of the fact that he loves her, no one but her, and everything about her.

He Knows the Path to Domestic Happiness.
Usually he does it with great skill and all apparent sincerity. He is, as I said, much in love with her. He has a sympathetic imagination and sufficient love in human nature, and especially woman nature, to know that such reassurance is one of the things all women want, and that there is no easier path to domestic happiness than to give it freely.

Now and then it seems as if I notice a strained note in his answers, and that is when she addresses such questions as this to him.

"They have met a very beautiful woman. The wife herself is sweet and charming but not pretty. 'Wouldn't you like it,' she says, 'if I were as beautiful as she?'"

Of course, he answers that he wouldn't like it at all. She makes him repeat it and affirm it and then perforce is satisfied. And it seems to me that he is more glad than usual to get the subject changed.

Can't She Use Her Common Sense.
Which does not mean that I think a shadow of disloyalty to his wife crosses his heart. Only this. Why shouldn't he be like the wife who is beautiful? Don't we all like beautiful things? Of course he wouldn't exchange her for the most beautiful woman in the world but if beauty were to be added unto her why should he object?

Perhaps a better example is this. They are speaking of a very clever woman who makes her own clothes with such taste and skill that she is able to produce, for very small sums, real confections that look as if they came straight from Paris. "Don't you wish I could do that," says the wife plaintively, "instead of being an old stupid who can only do plain sewing?"

Again he comes to the scratch and avers he would hate it.

Why Wear Devotion Thin?
But wouldn't you think common sense would teach her better? Why shouldn't she be pleased if she could do that sort of thing? Wouldn't his wife be pleased if he could earn ten thousand a year instead of three thousand? Of course, she wouldn't swap him for the ten thousand a year man but that's quite another matter.

It seems to me there are a good many women who do this sort of thing. And I think in so doing they make a mistake. Just because one is lucky enough to have a devoted husband is no reason for wearing that devotion thin by constant foolish demands upon it. Is it not enough to know that he would not exchange you for any woman in the world without asking him to pretend there are no charms or virtues in the world but yours?

GREEN FANCY

By

GEORGE BARR McCUTCHEN

Author of "Graustark," "The Hollow of Her Hand," "The Prince of Graustark," Etc.

Copyright by Dodd, Mead and Co., Inc. Barnes listened at the door until he heard the waiter clattering down the stairs, and then went swiftly down the hall to No. 30. Mr. Prosser was sleeping just as soundly and as resolutely as at midnight!

"By gad!" he muttered, half-aloud. Everything was as clear as day to him now. Bolting into his own room, he closed the door and stood stockstill for many minutes, trying to picture the scene in the cottage.

He found a letter in his box when he went downstairs, after stuffing the tin box deep into his pocket. Before he slit the envelope he knew that Sprague was the writer. The message was brief:

"After due consideration, I feel that it would be a mistake for you to abandon your present duties at this time. It might be misunderstood. Stick to the company until something better turns up. With this thought in view I withdraw the two days' limit mentioned recently to you, and extend the time to one week. Yours very truly, J. H. WILSON."

"Gad, the fellow thinks of everything," said Barnes to himself. "He is positively uncanny."

He read between the lines, and saw there a distinct warning. It had not occurred to him that his plan to leave for New York that day with Miss Cameron might be attended by disastrous results.

But the jewels? What of them? He could not go gallivanting about the country with a half million dollars' worth of precious stones in his possession.

He spent the early part of the forenoon in wandering nervously about the hotel—upstairs and down. The jewels were locked in his pack upstairs. He went up to his room half a dozen times and almost instantly walked down again, after satisfying himself that the pack had not been rifled.

For the next three days and nights rehearsals were in full swing, with scarcely a moment's let-up. And so

Many School Children are Sickly

Mothers who value their own comfort and the welfare of their children, should not be without a box of Mother's Own Tablets. These tablets are a mild but sure laxative, and their effect on the liver is almost instantaneous. They are the result of Dr. Edwards' determination to treat liver and bowel complaints with calomel. His efforts to banish it brought out these little olive-colored tablets.

The pleasant little tablets do the good that calomel does, but have no bad after effects. They don't injure the teeth like strong liquids or calomel. They take hold of the trouble and quickly correct it. Why cure the liver at the expense of the teeth? Calomel sometimes plays havoc with the gums. So do strong liquids. It is best not to take calomel, but to let Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets take its place.

Most headaches, "dizziness" and that lazy feeling come from constipation and a disordered liver. Take Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets when you feel "lumpy" and "heavy." Note how they "clear" clouded brain and how they "perk up" the spirits. 10c and 25c a box. All druggists.

THE DOT DRAWING CLASS

"I always consider the letter 'L' a rich letter," said the Dot Drawing teacher, "for by running a couple of lines through it I can make an English pound. Now let's see what we can do with it and the dot. I once went to a theater where there was a play about a man who hoarded his sovereigns and you would be surprised how much this letter looks like him. Here, by wish and you would win the dots from one on and see if you can make something that shines with wisdom, such as—" averaging two hundred dollars nightly and Mr. Rushcroft was already booking return engagements for the early fall. He was looking forward to a tour of Europe at the close of the war.

Barnes' sister, Mrs. Courtney, met them at the Grand Central terminal. "It's now a quarter to five," said Barnes after the greeting and presentation. "Drop me at the Fifth Avenue bank, Edith. I want to leave something in my safety box downstairs. She'll be more than five minutes."

He got down from the automobile at Forty-fourth street and shot across the sidewalk into the bank, casting quick, apprehensive glances through the five o'clock crowd on the avenue as he sprinted. In his hand he lugged the heavy, weatherbeaten pack. His sister and the countess stared after him in amazement.

Presently he emerged from the bank, still carrying the bag. He was beaming. A certain worried, haggard expression had vanished from his face, and for the first time in eight hours he treated his traveling wardrobe with scorn and indifference.

CHAPTER XXI.

The End in Sight

Barnes, soaring beyond all previous heights of exaltation, ranged dizzily between "front" and "back" at the Grand opera house that evening. He was in the "wings" with her, whispering in her delighted ear; in the dressing-room, listening to her soft words of encouragement to the excited leading lady; on the narrow stairs leading up to the stage, assisting her to mount them; and all the time he was dreading the moment when he would awake and find it all a dream.

There was an annoying fly in his ointment, however. "I love you," she had said simply. "I want more than anything else in all the world to be your wife. But I cannot promise now. I must have time to think, time to—"

"Why should you require more time than I?" he persisted. "What is time to you? Why make wanton waste of it?"

"I know that I cannot find happiness except with you," she replied. "No matter what happens to me, I shall always love you. I shall never forget the joy of this. But— I cannot promise now," she finished gently and kissed him.

Between the second and third acts Tommy Gray rushed back with the box-office statement. The gross was $350. The instant that fact became known to Mr. Rushcroft he informed Barnes that they had a "knockout," a gold mine, and that never in all his career had he known a season to start off so auspiciously as this one.

Three days later Barnes and "Miss Jones" said farewell to the strollers and boarded a day train for New York city. They left the company in a condition of prosperity. The show was

The two little rabbits, Uncle Lucky and Billy Bunny, the Yellow Dog Tramp and the Fiddler Grasshopper hadn't gone very far in the Luckymobile when the roaring mad bull I told you about in the story before this started after them. My goodness me, how he did run! He put his head close to the ground so that his horns stuck right out in front of him like a cow-catcher, and his eyes got as red as fire, and the breath came out of his nostrils like steam from a locomotive. He was so angry because the engineer won't ring the bell and start up the train.

"O, dearest me!" said the old gentleman rabbit, looking back and over the top of his goggles. "If that angry bull ever catches us he'll just ruin my old wedding stovepipe hat."

And I guess he was right for pretty soon that dreadful bull came closer and closer until one of his horns touched the back of the Luckymobile.

"Oh, dear, and oh, dear!" said Billy Bunny. "Something must be done in a hurry." So he opened his knapsack and took out a little tin box of pepper, and then he leaned over the back seat and peppered that roaring, rearing, dreadful bull right on his nose, and in less time than I can take to tell it to him he began to sneeze, and every time he sneezed he blew the Luckymobile ahead more than a mile, and after he had sneezed thirteen times, why the Luckymobile was on top of his nose, and the two little rabbits, the sight and the Yellow Dog Tramp and the grasshopper who played tunes on his left hind leg with his right wing, were safe as could be.

Now, children dear, if ever a bull goes chasing you, Just take along a peppercorn And shake it on his cue.

Of course if he isn't a 'Chinese bull' you can't shake it on his cue. But if he's just an ordinary everyday pasture grazing bull, then a little peppercorn will do the trick. And you'll be chasing him in an automobile.

"Well, that was a lucky escape," said the Yellow Dog Tramp. "But goodness me! There's so much pepper in the air I'll have to put on my goggles." And then would you believe it, he pulled a gas mask out from under the rear seat and put it on.

"That isn't a gas mask," said the grasshopper. "It's a mink." And then the Yellow Dog Tramp looked over his shoulder for he saw he had made a dreadful mistake.

Well, after that they all rode along very quietly for many a mile, until they came to a little green house by the roadside where a little peepo lived. So they all got out of the Luckymobile and knocked at the door.

"What do you want?" asked Mr. Peepo, and he looked like a cushion full of needles.

"I need some gasoline for my Luckymobile," said the old gentleman rabbit. So the peepo gave the rabbits a nice drink of gasoline and after that the little rabbits drove away.

BROOKLYN

Brooklyn, May 2.—Friday afternoon the pupils of the public school enjoyed a half-holiday, the teachers of the school being on their vacation day.

The forepart of the afternoon was spent in cleaning up the school yard, after which all the pupils assembled in the main room where a short program was given. Superintendent Burns, Mayor, gave a short talk on thrift.

After the program a baseball game between Oregon and Brooklyn was played. The score was 4 to 5 in favor of Oregon.

The two little daughters of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Tullis have been ill during the past week.

Thursday evening Mr. and Mrs. Delbert Smith entertained the teachers of the public school and Miss Daisy Baldwin at a dinner party.

Supt. John N. Burns and wife of Monroe, visited schools here Friday. The James McCredie expects to leave for Detroit, Mich., Sunday, where they will make their home in the future. Mr. McCredie will be employed in a factory there.

Miss Zita Shiveron has returned from Madison where she has been visiting relatives.

Mrs. Virgil Hopkins and sons, Milo and Earl, Mrs. Robert Smith and Mr. and Mrs. Owen Robertson were Madison visitors Tuesday.

The members of the Senior class of the public school are now busily engaged in practicing for their class play.

Don't Experiment with Catarrh; It Often Leads to Dread Consumption

You Will Never Be Cured With Sprays and Douches.

Catarrh is a condition of the blood and can not be cured by local applications of sprays and douches; this has been proven by the thousands who have vainly resorted to this method of treatment.

Catarrh should not be neglected or experimented with. The wrong treatment which the disease is getting, a firmer hold upon its victim, and making it more difficult for even the proper treatment to accomplish results.

Though Catarrh makes its first appearance in the nostrils, throat and air passages, the disease becomes more reaches down into the lungs, and everyone recognizes the alarming condition that results when the lungs are affected. Thus Catarrh may be the forerunner of that more dreaded and hopeless of all diseases, consumption.

No local treatment affords permanent relief. Experience has taught that S. S. S. is the one remedy which attacks the disease at its source, the blood, and produces satisfactory results, even in the worst cases. Catarrh sufferers are urged to give S. S. S. a thorough trial. AND HE DID

I'M GOING TO PUT SOME FIRE CRACKERS IN THE STOVE AND SURPRISE THE COOK!

AND HE DID

ALL IS MYSTERY! SAITH THE DETECTIVE.

The thing was, in itself, very mysterious. No name was given over the phone and the man said he would send for him, that is, Dr. F. Fishent, who was the doctor's name.

Now why send for him if he were an urgent case, when the doctor could crank up his fiver in less than an hour, whereas it would take at least ten minutes to be sent for and ten more to arrive at the mysterious patient's house?

When the doctor was called for, the man, blindfolded him, and before putting him into the waiting car, turned him around each way three times.

"It's one of these Bolshevik bulls, I guess," thought the Doctor. "If I thought so, I'd cure him with a little skunk of the Jacobins."

He entered the patient's room still blindfolded, Dr. F. Fishent, not being able to see the man, felt his pulse.

"Heavens!" he cried. "This is dreadful. Pulse going sixty beats a minute. I'll have to operate on your carburetor; there's a—"

"Hey! That's not my pulse you're sneezing; it's my wrist watch!" So great was the doctor's embarrassment, that he backed out of the door and down three flights of stairs, receiving naught but a fractured umbrella and sprained buckles.

True Meaning of the World League As Mrs. Humphry Ward Views It

BY MRS. HUMPHRY WARD

A courteous commandant, telephoned to me from below, comes down from some upper region to greet us, to give us lunch and show us some of the underground wonders of the famous Verdun citadel. Presently on our walk I hear a sigh beside me. "Oh, it is interesting enough. But in 1918 when one brought visitors here the shells were raining on the town and on all the approaches to it. There was danger at every step. But did it matter? France was winning the war. It was the voice of the white-haired French officer in whose charge we were—regretting for a moment the glorious and the incredible day of the battle. We both laughed, but it was my only laugh at Verdun. Afterward we drove through the eastern section of the battlefield, past what was once Fort Souville, along an upper road, with Vaux on our right and Douaumont on the northern edge of the hill in front of us, descending again by Froide Terre, with the Cote de Poivre on our right, and looking across the Meuse at the line of Mort Homme, the Crows' wood and the Goose's Crest, names on which Europe hung day after day in those marvelous four months from February to June, 1918.

Every yard of these hillside has been fought over again and again; has seen in some places the dead piled meters high, as on Hill 304, and on the slopes of Douaumont, and has seen the part of the French soldiers' duty of endurance, a passion of resolve such as those perhaps alone can know who hear through all their being the mystic call of the soil, the very earth, the actual fatherland on which they fight.

Crown Prince's Failure
And on the part of the attackers there was a courage no less amazing, but of another sort, the effect of an iron discipline, hypnotizing the individual will and conferring on the soldier such superhuman power of dying at another man's will as history—on such a scale—has never seen equalled. In the first battle of Verdun a million men were involved in a semicircle of some thirty miles. The Germans lost over 200,000, the French not quite half that number. It lasted forty-eight days—February 21 to April 9—and the crown prince when he started on his terrible adventure had promised Verdun to Germany in four!

The humiliation was too great; the risk too costly; too tremendous, and fortune—"toute entiere a sa proie attachee"—drove the German army again into the furnace. Here along these dreadful slopes, where every yard of the original hillside has been pounded and churned and blasted by high explosives, and in these shattered trenches where, as Colonel Duhaie, the veteran commander of the citadel during the battle year, himself expressed it to me in Paris, "four dead to the meter" was a common ratio the fight went on.

Here was Thiamont—there was Chambray wood—to the right the Welmar trench, and further on the Haudmont wood. Over that crest came the German attack that captured Vaux in June, while up that gully and along that swell of tortuous ground went Mangin's attack that in December recovered the lost and pushed the Germans back—with their dead and their shame—to the line from which they had started in February.

Greatest War Story
A marvelous story! The greatest story of the war, when all is reckoned up. Everything contributed: the fame of the ancient fortress, the political issues involved, the passion of patriotism evoked by the struggle in the French Army, the contempt for death shown by the French soldier, and the spirit of sacrifice of life on the part of the German command—altogether here made of Verdun a legendary name which will ring forever in history.

Just as we ask of our French comrades to recognize, more generally and perhaps more generously than some of their military writers are inclined to do, the final and decisive part played by the British army and the British navy last year in the salvation of France and of Europe, and to teach it fairly to French children, so British children and British young men and maidens throughout the empire ought to be heavily educated to recognize the unique claims of France in the earlier chapters of the great story of that France who held the fort and bore the onslaught when no one else was ready; France who with her admirable army, the only army then in Europe capable of checking the leader, held up the unspent forces of Germany on the Marne, and bore the main brunt of battle through the whole of 1918; France, who at Verdun in 1916 not only added to the chapter of the unspent forces of human heroism, but so weakened the German forces that the effects of Verdun were felt for two years afterward, and but for the Russian breaking down might have been among the most potent forces deciding the ultimate victory of the allies. And in addition, of course, to these claims, which are all her own, there is the France, who in the admirable brain and strategic gift of Marshal Foch, contributed even in the last year of the war, when it had become a matter of life and death for her as a nation to recognize her man power in the struggle, an element of supreme importance to the final result.

FRANCE MUST BE JUST.
French patriotism, securely possessed as it is of these glorious, these indisputable rights to the ear and itself, just may be generous to the claims of others. All the same there are some disquieting signs in French popular literature at the present moment of a grudging temper toward the record of France's allies in the war which is hardly worthy of her.

To judge from some of the articles now appearing in French periodicals on the war, the British army and the British commander in chief only existed last year as a subordinate element in Marshal Foch's calculations, and the British attack on the Hindenburg line was a mere minor operation.

We are here no doubt, in the presence of that intense nationalism of France which is the product of her history, for instance, her coldness in the presence of great cosmopolitan schemes like that of the league of nations. But, carried to excess, it may sometimes blur the shining record of a great country.

For if the future, as I for one firmly believe, is with nationality, it must surely be nationality informed with new sympathies and new knowledge. In the world that is coming no nation will be able to live to itself or die to itself. We shall all be members one of another.

MEANING OF THE LEAGUE.
That no doubt, is the meaning of the league of nations movement. But the success of that movement will depend upon a number of smaller forces—upon the learning of foreign languages, the nature of the school books used by the children of a nation, the promotion of reciprocity between universities, the continuous effort, in fact, to pull down those social and spiritual barriers between the lives of nations which are at present far too numerous even between peoples like France, England, Italy and America, who share a common intellectual and religious heritage.

Hun Correspondent is Bitter in His Views

Berlin, May 5.—Newspaper men with the German peace delegation at Versailles are sending generally conservative accounts of their experiences, but Schuermann, the correspondent of the German Gazette who visited a trenchant, bitter pen during the war, does not disguise his disgust at the treatment accorded the Germans by the French.

He devotes the most of his report today to "the freedom of movement" accorded the German delegation, which he says is restricted to limits. He tells of a stenographer who sought to purchase tooth powder at a drug store and "nearly caused a diplomatic breach," the incident ending with her expulsion from the store.

The writer says that American correspondents, "believing they do in Berlin" tried to interview a member of the German delegation on its arrival, but were sharply denied the privilege.

Schuermann complains of the high prices, especially since the German mark must be transformed into francs and says the charge for making the exchange is exorbitant. He closes by saying:

"The Frenchmen are neither too petty nor proud to do cheap business with enemy delegates."

D'Annunzio, Italian Poet, is Stricken With Fever

Rome, May 5.—Gabriel D'Annunzio, Italian poet, was stricken with fever following an address at the Augusteum today and was forced to go to bed. He hopes, however, Monday, to lead a demonstration parade of Romans to the capitol to proclaim the annexation of Fiume and Dalmatia to Italy.

Reports from all Italian towns describe manifestations similar to those held today in Rome. The municipality of Brescia which had decided to present President Wilson with a copy of its famous statue of victory, cast in bronze in 1918, had decided to present the statue to Fiume.

RURAL CREDITS BILL GIVES AID TO FARMER

(SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.)

Madison, May 5.—Those familiar with the needs of Wisconsin believe that the rural credits bill introduced by Senator Wilkinson, chairman of the joint finance committee, will go far toward the solution of the biggest problem of the Wisconsin settler or farmer.

The enactment of this measure will make it possible for farmers to secure easily the long time aid often so much needed in farm development.

It is pointed out that the federal farm loan act has already been of material service in bettering agricultural credit, but as its provisions are applicable only to the man who is in a position to give less than a 50 percent mortgage on his farm, it does not cover the needs of those who are trying to get a start in farming, but have not yet gotten to the point where they can make a federal loan.

Senator Wilkinson's bill is based on the land mortgage association act passed by the legislature in 1913, but its provisions are more extensive and very much perfected from the five years' experience.

In framing the proposed measure, Senator Wilkinson has built upon the recommendations of the commission of 15 appointed last fall, by Gov. Philipp.

THE WISHING PLANE

The plane flew on and on all night. But Jack and Jane slept just as tight as though they had been home instead. Of high above the clouds in bed.

In fact they slept so sound that the first thing they knew Old Mister Sun was shining right in their faces, so bright that they couldn't keep their eyes shut, and their eyelids popped right open.

When they looked around the room Ladydear was getting breakfast and the table was already set, so they had to scramble out of bed and dress in a hurry.

Jack was the first to look out the windows of the airplane and he started to dance up and down with joy the very first thing.

"Hurrah, we are out over the ocean," he exclaimed, "and there's a great big boat down there. I'll just bet it's a battleship or something." Jane rushed to the window and said, "Let me see, too."

Then Ladydear told them that during the night they had left the land far behind, and were now riding the wings of the airplane over the Atlantic ocean.

While the children were still talking about the strange things they could see, Jack noticed that the airplane was going just like an automobile would coast down a long hill.

Ladydear and Jane noticed it, too, and all three of them hurried up to Captain Brave to find out what the trouble was.

Captain Brave was sitting at the steering wheel, just as if nothing unusual was happening at all. Booh, however, was trying to scare the ocean away with his ferocious little bark. He barked so hard that the children feared he might jump right out of the airplane.

"Nothing the matter at all," said the Captain. "We are going to make a call in the middle of the ocean, just as your mother calls on the folks on the next street."

"Who are we going to see?" said both kiddies in one breath.

"We are going to call on Captain Bold."

Then Captain Brave told them how he had arranged to meet Captain Bold, who was in charge of one of the big American submarines in the war. Captain Bold had told him where the submarine would be, and Captain Brave had steered for the point, using a map that he had, oh, so many markings on it that neither you nor I nor Mother or Father nor anybody that didn't know all about flying and sailing could figure out what it was all about.

"Will we really see the submarine real close?" asked Jack.

"Unless I am greatly mistaken," said Captain Brave. "Captain Bold will want us to climb into his submarine and take a ride with him."

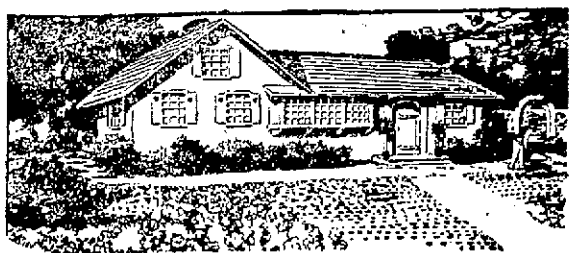

"Oh, goody, goody," they exclaimed together.

By that time the airship was so close to the water that they expected any minute to find themselves on it. And just a little bit ahead was a big black object in the water that Ladydear said was the submarine. A couple of minutes later they could see men standing on the submarine waving at them. But we haven't room to tell you more today.

Wet Grounds Keep Janes And Edgerton Idle

By George McManus.

J. A. MURPHY TAKES OVER THE LOCAL BALL TEAM

BULLETIN

J. A. Murphy, umpire and veteran baseball man, today took over the Janesville Baseball Club from K. L. Eagon. Although the team needs players and is in debt and despite the apparent lack of enthusiasm and support, Murphy seems to think he can put baseball over here. We wish him all kinds of luck.

The team has nine uniforms, two new baseballs, two gloves, half a dozen bats and $8.30 in the bank. The liabilities will include a bill of $35 to Sheldon's if said shop ever gets the additional uniforms ordered 17 days ago. There are also some outstanding telephone and telegraph bills.

(By K. L. EAGON.)

The weatherman again dealt gloom to the Janes and fans yesterday. After heroic efforts to dry the Edgerton diamond were made and oil and sawdust were invoked, Manager Smith notified Manager Eagon at 1:05 p. m. over the long distance telephone that it would be impossible to play.

Edgerton Sorry, Too.

"We are just as disappointed as you are," Smith said, "and we have been trying hard all morning to put the field in condition to play, but it has been impossible."

Manager Smith said he would like to play Janesville here, but no date was given him. The players and half a hundred loyal fans hung around the hotel and downtown corners until nearly 2 o'clock when it was announced that the game was irrevocably off. Most of the players then decided to have a "ill game of their own," dealing from the book of knowledge in 52 chapters.

Then Sun Came Out.

After the game had been called off, the sun came out and it looked as if there could have been a ball game. The Janes had simply gone on up to Edgerton.

As things stand now, it is not known as yet whether or not there will be a game here next Sunday. The writer is discouraged at the way things have broken in trying to give Janesville a baseball team. If there is anyone in the city who is interested in giving the city a baseball club, step in now, for the writer can do no more.

Gas House District Developed Real Ball Players, Says Old Timer

(By J. D. O'HARA)

In reading of the contest between the Gas house nine and Red Devils in last Monday's Gazette reminded me of the Gas house team before the time of the Mutuals. At that time there was a club known as the "Timp of the Prairie," which had a record of two years to its credit without one defeat, meeting all the clubs in the city of their age. Most of the contests took place on the ground where the Gas house factory now stands, and many of the contests took place there for the amateur championship of the city.

Many of the players later on became members of the old Mutuals semi-professional team. John Morrissey, "Duck" Sutherland, W. D. Cantillon, Thomas Cantillon and Tom Morrissey.

No doubt but that there is just as good material for a baseball club in the city now as there was at that time, but they neglect the one essential thing that makes baseball players—that is practice. Not once a week, but every day in the week, which was the rule at that time among these players. Out of some fifteen or more men who played ball in either the national or other leagues at that time, or later on, 95 percent of them came from the Gas house district.

Would also wish to say a final word in regard to the Mutuals-White Stockings game, which was won by the home club by a score of 5 to 4. McVey of the White Stockings, the first man to bat, was a big, burly fellow, just the kind you would expect to knock the cover off the ball, when he hit it, and this he nearly accomplished when he came up as first batsman for the White Hose, as he swatted the ball for a home run, and when asked by one of his comrades, "How's the pitcher?" said: "He's easy!" But after fanning the air in an attempt to find the ball the next three times, when he came up to bat, changed his mind. Would also mention some other players other than Ward and Bushong, who had national reputations as ball players.

John Shoup, who came here from the Memphis Reds, second baseman of the Mutuals, I believe had no rival for that position. Although his duties were to play second, he covered all the ground from shortstop to first like an octopus, and seemed to be able to get the ball wherever it was thrown at him. The ball left the bat he seemed to foresee the direction it was going and if it was possible for any human being to stop it he did the trick.

John Morrissey is another of the old Mutuals who was more than an ordinary player, and on one occasion, while a member of the Birmingham, N. Y. club, as third baseman, fielded a swift liner, and in so doing was thrown into a sitting posture, but nevertheless threw out the runner at first. All the papers in the east at that time declared that it was the first time such a feat was ever accomplished, and I believe it has never since been repeated.

Another player who contested the honors for state championship with the Mutuals, was Bennett of the Milwaukee team, and who afterward became the mainstay of the old championship Boston team and was recognized as the best catcher ever in the game, and later had both legs cut off in a railroad accident later on; another player who gives you some idea of the calibre of the men which opposed the old Mutuals.

The Consumer and The Standard Oil Company (Indiana)

THE Standard Oil Company (Indiana) always has recognized the men and women who use its products as the ultimate judges of the success of the Company's earnest effort to render a superior service.

The Standard Oil Company (Indiana) conducts its business with but one goal as an objective—that every individual purchaser of Standard Oil products shall experience complete satisfaction with every purchase.

When the Company reaches this goal, then, and only then, will the Board of Directors, acting as Trustees for the 4623 stockholders, feel that their ideals have been realized.

Neither the Company, nor the patrons, can be satisfied unless the product is uniformly up to the highest standard of excellence—unless it can be bought without inconvenience—unless the price charged represents true value.

To bring about this degree of satisfaction, unerring accuracy in manufacture, complete distribution, and efficiency in keeping down operating costs are essential.

Working without precedent, but with high ideals, integrity of purpose, and a keen sense of its obligation as a public servant, the Company believes it has succeeded.

The judgment of the consuming public has been for the most part favorable to the Company, as is shown by the ever increasing volume of business which the Standard Oil Company of Indiana is enjoying.

The best friends of the Standard Oil Company of Indiana are those customers who have used its goods, and its service, for the longest time.

Status of Italy With Great Powers Is Powerful Lever In Bringing Orlando Back

Paris, Sunday, May 4.—The status of Italy as one of the five great powers has been brought into question by her withdrawal from the peace conference and it is this status which is proving a powerful lever in inducing Italy to accept the invitation of the council of three to resume her place in the peace. The treaty of peace is now reported to be in the hands of the five great powers as final authority in regulating many subjects and this provision would have to be changed to "four great powers" in case Italy remained out of the conference.

Problems incident to the disposition of the German colonies are left by treaty to the great powers so that Italy does not resume her place the treaty would exclude her from participating in the disposition of the colonies either directly or as a mandator.

Treaty Being Printed.

The text of the treaty has been delivered to the printers with the exception of some details which can be revised when the complete printed draft is ready. Owing to the doubts as to Italy's status the protocol of the treaty will be prepared in two forms, one including Italy as a signatory and the other omitting her. Both these forms and the entire text of the treaty will be printed tomorrow.

President Wilson today expressed his belief to a member of the American delegation that the delivery of the treaty to the Germans could be made Tuesday afternoon but this evening probably will go over until later day to give the Italians time to return and to allow time for adjustment of remaining questions concerning Belgium. Thus far the printed text of the treaty does not include the provision on the responsibility of former Emperor William and others for the war and the methods to be followed for their trials. This may be inserted at the last moment.

League Executives to Meet.
The executive committee which will launch the league of nations will hold its first meeting tomorrow. President Wilson or Colonel House will represent the United States; Lord Robert Cecil will appear for England; Stephen Pichon for France; Premier Venizelos for Greece; the Spanish ambassador for Spain and Dr. Epitacio Pessoa for Brazil.

Italy will not be represented. The organization of the league will be perfected, many committees appointed and plans probably will be drafted for the initial meeting of the league at Washington next October.

These close to President Wilson say that June 1 will without doubt be the date for the assembling of the executive session of the league.

The determination of the conference to begin the negotiation of a peace treaty to the Germans has been made known to Italy. It is expected the Austrians will arrive toward the middle of May and plans for their accommodation at St. Germain are being made by the French authorities.

Whether Hungary will be asked to join the treaty will depend on the outcome of the present disorders there. It said that the Austrian treaty will be featured by the outlining of the boundaries of states newly formed from the old empire. The Bulgarian and Turkish treaties will follow but the time for summoning the delegates from these nations has not as yet been fixed.

Capt. Walter Haight, Racine, told of his personal war experiences. He said the awful weariness would be remembered much longer than the bursting bombs. "A brief rest meant that instead of remaining where you were, you went somewhere else," he continued. "The Americans were suited to trench warfare. They were too restless to stay long in a ditch. On the other hand, the Germans had been trained for trench warfare only, and they lost their nerve in open field."
